Pandemonium, or something like it, reigned for a while at the corner of Hotel and Fort streets last Saturday evening.

It was a hot night, and a large number of thirsty people were passing in and out of the Pantheon, when the Salvation Army came along and, by making considerably more noise than usual, so augmented the crowd that it was difficult to get by.

Just as everything was booming, including the big drum, Nigger Jackson and his electrical machine hurried up and, getting as close as possible to the red jerseys, started in opposition.

Hotel street was packed solid in five minutes and Jackson's plug hat helper and the loudest voiced of the army endeavored strenuously to outdo one another.

"Salvation is free, gentlemen, and you are on your way to get a shock of lightning!"

"We offer up our prayers!"

"Only ten cents a time!"

"Come now before it is too late!"

"Try your muscle against the battery!"

"Don't wait! Tomorrow you may be!"

"Right here in the corner!"

"Now is the time!"
